in against immediate evil andrew johnstone tells the story of how internationalist americans worked between 1938 and 1941 to convince the u s government and the american public of the need to stem the rising global tide of fascist aggression as war approached the internationalist movement attempted to arouse the nation in order to defeat noninterventionism at home and fascism overseas johnstone s examination of this movement undermines the common belief that the japanese attack on pearl harbor wrenched an isolationist united states into global armed conflict and the struggle for international power johnstone focuses on three organizations the american committee for non participation in japanese aggression the committee to defend america by aiding the allies and fight for freedom that actively promoted a more global role for the united states based on a conception of the four freedoms later made famous by fdr the desire to be free from fear was seen in concerns regarding america s immediate national security the desire to be free from want was expressed in anxieties over the nation s future economic prosperity the need for freedom of speech was represented in concerns over the potential loss of political freedoms finally the need for freedom of worship was seen in the emphasis on religious freedoms and broader fears about the future of western civilization these groups and their supporters among the public and within the government characterized the growing global conflict as one between two distinct worlds and in doing so set the tone of american foreign policy for decades to come the book examines the public s influence on foreign policy through case studies including the formosa straits crisis intervention at dien bien phu the sputnik launch the new look defense strategy the panama canal treaties the soviet invasion of afghanistan the strategic defense initiative the beirut marine barracks bombing german reunification the gulf war and intervention in somalia and bosnia originally published in 1982 trade and aid outlines the transition of u s foreign policy during the eisenhower administration in the years leading up to eisenhower s election america s predominant foreign economic program was based on the concept of trade not aid which deemphasized foreign aid and relied instead on liberalized world trade and the encouragement of private foreign investment to assure world economic growth when eisenhower took office in 1953 he embraced this doctrine however as problems in the third world worsened it became clear to eisenhower and other architects of american foreign policy that trade and private investment were insufficient solutions to the economic woes of developing nations in 1954 eisenhower began to embrace economic aid as a core axis of his foreign economic policy burton i kaufman contextualizes eisenhower s foreign policy leadership in the ongoing historical evaluation of eisenhower s leadership prowess he evaluates the outcomes of the eisenhower administration s trade and aid program arguing that developing countries were worse off by the time eisenhower left office
